Cook It In Cast Iron: Kitchen-Tested Recipes For The One Pan That Does It All (Cook's Country)

Synopsis

Learn to cook it all in cast iron! The cast-iron skillet is a sturdy, versatile, traditional kitchen workhorse that 85% of us own but far fewer of us reach for daily, mostly because we have one or two recipes we use it for and otherwise it stays in the back of the cabinet. In this new cookbook, the editors of Cook's Country will show you everything you need to know about cast-iron cookware and the many (and often surprising) dishes you can cook and bake in this multitasker of a pan, from the classic dishes everyone knows and loves like steak, perfect fried eggs, and cornbread, to innovative and inspiring recipes like skillet apple pie, pizza, and cinnamon swirl bread. Learn about this cast iron's history and what makes it uniquely American and let us show you how to shop for, season, care for, and clean this perfect pan.

I didn't until I got this book. b. You can use a cast iron fry pan on electric or gas stoves. Everything you really need to know about this timeless American workhorse, the Cast Iron Frying pan all published in this one book.

First, the Pros. Christopher Kimball's mini food media empire includes America's Test Kitchen, Cook's Illustrated and Cook's Country. I have read Cook's Illustrated for years and years and can vouch for the empire's reputation for meticulous research in recipes and product evaluation. I bought this because I wanted to see all the results of that research on cast iron cookware. I am not disappointed. Their findings on seasoning, cleaning and using cast iron dispel contradicting advice and myths that accumulated over a century. These findings also provide simpler and easier ways to clean and maintain your cast iron than you will find most anywhere else. Now, the Cons. I very rarely pay any attention to Cook's Country because I rarely find its recipes appealing. This book is done by Cook's Country and provides Cook's Country type recipes. Very few of them appeal to me at all. Dips, for example, are something we have not made since the 80's. I'd rather set out olives and a couple of good cheeses when entertaining. I wish they had included some Cook's Illustrated sort of recipes, adapted for cast iron. Secondly, the font size used. Mr. Kimball should recognize that his readership is not comprised solely of millennials. Those of us with older eyes and/or vision problems do not like needing a magnifying glass to read a cook book. It seems as if a tiny typeface was selected to accommodate the one page per recipe format used. Lastly, I wish he would stop putting hardbound prices to paperback books.

I absolutely adore both of my cast iron skillets, so when I saw that this book was going to be published I hit the pre-order button. America's Test Kitchen/Cook's Illustrated or Cook's Country is one of my most trusted recipe sources. I absolutely love this cookbook, and have marked a LOT of recipes. First, I really liked the information on how to season a cast-iron skillet, and also breaking myths about not being able to cook acidic products, or using soap and water to clean a cast iron skillet. I own both Le Creuset skillets and Dutch ovens, and Lodge skillets...and found it really interesting to read the reviews and comparisons to using enamel cast iron or plain cast iron. The recipes... while I haven't made any, please trust that I'm an advanced cook and can tell if a recipe is going to be good, by the ingredients and reading directions. Of course, once I make recipes from this book (and I will, and I will blog them as well), I'll update my review. Here are some "gotta make" recipes that I've already bookmarked: The Baked Pepperoni dip-- I don't care if the fat police break my door down. This will be fun to serve at a casual dinner party. Baked Brie with honeyed apricots... yes! Spicy Garlic Shrimp (they had me at garlic) Lamb meatballs with yogurt sauce, Caramelized onion, pear, and bacon tart, come to Mama. Then there's chicken: Blackened chicken with pineapple-cucumber salsa, Oven-seared chicken breasts with leek and tarragon pan sauce, Indoor barbecued chicken (gorgeous pictures, by the way for every single recipe), Where's the beef? There's plenty: Cowboy steaks, Thick-cut steaks with herb butter, pork chops, pork tenderloin (I was drooling), Crisp skinned salmon with honey-lime sauce. Mahi-Mahi. pan-seared scallops with various sauces. I haven't made London Broil in ages, and the marinated London Broil looks so good! There are beautiful roasts, and pizzas, and skillet dinners. Pot pies, galore! Chicken. Steak. Pork. Yum! Burgers. Sandwiches. I want them all. Breakfasts, too-- eggs, omelets. Dutch babies. Corned Beef Hash, to name just a few. Bread! Yes, beautiful breads. Biscuits. Cornbreads. The pull-apart garlic rolls are going to be tops on my list to make. I love baking bread. The cinnamon swirl bread is gorgeous, and I cannot wait to make that. I make great cinnamon rolls, and their skillet version that is a quick version-- oh, yeah. I'm making that for my boys. Beautiful desserts: cobblers, pies, fruit cakes, fruit tarts and a skillet chocolate chip cookie that I'm fighting the urge to make right now. The hot fudge pudding cake had me swooning. I love this cookbook, and am so excited to make many of the recipes. I know they'll turn out great because I read recipes and follow directions (rarely tweaking until I've made it their way at least once) and I can't recall a single recipe from these cookbook authors that I didn't like. Well done! UPDATE: I made the skillet Chocolate Chip Cookies. How can anyone improve this classic cookie? By browning most of the butter, and baking it in cast iron. The "skookie" was crispy on the outside and bottom, and chewy in the middle. I had a hard time resisting them.
